The product's DNA includes a series of tapered cylinders reminiscent of sandcastles built along a coastline. Much like a sandcastle, where there is visual variation in height and scale, this collection explores ways to spatially plan and arrange furniture to create fluid use of the outdoors. The collection includes a series of tables scaled to support interactive outdoor use. The overall height of each table creates a horizontal sight (or datum) line that visually separates leisurely lounge areas from dining spaces.

Operational/Functional Aspects: The modern table base is offered with a variety of performance-based materials including powder-coated aluminum, smooth fiberglass, porcelain and solid surface tops. Structurally and functionally, the foundation of the largest table base utilizes counterweights made from high-performing, water-resistant fabric filled with sand. This clean, simple modern table design supports the longevity of use and timeless elements that span a wide range of outdoor applications, allowing for work and life seamlessly outdoors.
